LIVERADE MEDICINE CO. TO LEAVE FULTON

The Liverade Co., which has been a Fulton institution for many years, will shortly move their headquarters to Louisville. This move is in line with expansions being made by the concern. They have increased their capital stock to $200,000 and have secured a large firm of wholesale and retail druggists as stockholders and directors in the company.

EGGS AND FOWLS PLENTIFUL

Storage Houses Are Full and Farmers Have Increased Flocks to Unusual Extent.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

This fall and winter eggs and poultry will be plentiful and prices should be low enough to make them economical. Just now storage houses are full of eggs and farmers have increased their flocks of poultry to an unusual extent. On August 1 there were 4,812,248 cases of eggs in storage, which is about 35 per cent more than the average at this season for the last three years.

Eggs start moving out of storage in summer and the greatest sales of such eggs come in fall and early winter. As a rule, the bulk of storage eggs are sold before the first of January, the activity of the market after that date depending on whether the weather is severe or mild enough to stimulate egg production. An open winter practically eliminates the storage eggs early in the season. But this year, regardless of the state of the weather, eggs should be available at very reasonable prices from the start.

Poultry farming, both as a specialty and as a side issue on other farms, has been one of the best-paying lines of agricultural work during the last two or three years, which accounts for the large supplies on hand this year. Prices to the farmer, however, have now reached a low point on both eggs and poultry, and he is not marketing poultry freely, but is holding his birds for better prices or using them on the table at home. Poultry fattening stations that are usually crowded at this season are now only about two-thirds full.

TREATMENT FOR SCALY LEG

Mix Kerosene and Lard Together and Thoroughly Brush Into Covering on Feet.

One of the most common remedies for scaly leg of fowls is to mix together kerosene and lard and thoroughly brush or rub this into the scales covering the foot and shank. It is rather harsh treatment, but will cure the trouble if repeated at intervals of a week. Some cases will be cured with two applications, while others may need several.

Probably the best remedy is oil of caraway. Mix one part of oil of caraway with five parts of vaseline. This material is very penetrating, but not nearly as irritating as kerosene. Rub the ointment in the leg and repeat every few days until signs of the disease disappear.

MITES ARE BLOOD SUCKERS

Pests Are Detrimental to Health of Fowls and Are Extremely Hard to Eradicate.

Mites feed on the birds, sucking their blood, during the night, but in the day retire to the dark crevices in the poultry house. Because of their blood sucking they are very detrimental to the health of the fowl. Thoroughly spray the house with some good disinfectant such as any of the cattle dips, crude oil, kerosene emulsion, etc. Care should be used to get the solution in to the cracks and dark corners.

HENS ARE OFTEN DISTURBED

Interference With Nervous System Is Frequently Sufficient to Set Layers Back.

To a great many persons it will seem like going to extremes, but, nevertheless, it is true that interference with the nervous system is frequently great enough to cause a serious drain on the vitality of the laying hen, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Various things that interfere with the ordinary daily life of the fowls may be put in this class. Hens are often disturbed, especially those of the more nervous breeds, by the presence of strangers. Changing them about frequently from one pen to another is also a disturbing factor and will set the layers back, as will the mixing together of birds that have been separated for some time.
